Dr Trevor and Mrs Helen Geddes will be taking the training. They are from New Zealand where their software is widely used by schools and parents. Trevor is the software developer and Helen leads training and supporting schools and families using the software. They also are the parents of a son with both Down Syndrome and Autism and so understand the stresses involved in supporting a special needs child and they share from their own experiences.

About the software This software can be used to teach English and Bahasa Melayu. It is interactive software and has been developed to assist students learn to read and write who have significant language delay or are non verbal and who have failed to make progress with literacy skills. These tools allow you to quickly create customised reading and writing material using photos and video so that students are motivated to learn from personalised books.
